Early Social Reports on Mass-Immigration in the Israeli Foreign Language Press between Orientalism and Solidarity

In this dialogic Schiur we want to reflect on the Israeli German language press as a source of general Israeli history from the angle of various academic disciplines.

As a case study we will discuss the weekly "Mitteilungsblatt". This humanist journal started continuously investigating about the living conditions of new immigrants in camps and settlements from the beginning of the mass immigration in 1949.

About the Event

Marie Ch. Behrendt is an Adjunct Researcher at the Brucerius Institute and a doctoral candidate of the University of Potsdam, Germany. She will present a part of her research on the Israeli German Language Press in the 1950s.

Commentators:

Moshe Zimmermann (Hebrew University)
 Oren Meyers & Moshe Naor (University of Haifa)
 Marc Volovici (Berbeck, University of London)

They will comment from the fields of German Jewish history, Media Studies, Iraqi-Jewish History and Zionist Language Politics.

Does a non-Hebrew perspective on the decisive demographic changes in the early 1950s change our understanding of innerjewish relations in that period?

The event takes place according to the instruction of the Health Ministry. Please, provide a mask and the Green Pass.
